

Volume 4 2011 edition

Call for Papers

African Presidential Rhetoric

The African Journal of Rhetoric (AJR) seeks papers on different aspects of African Presidential Rhetoric. Any observer of African Politics would observe the use and abuse of rhetoric in the African public domain without deep analysis of this phenomenon. There is need for us to discuss African Presidential rhetoric in all its forms, particularly under civilian regimes. What are the roles that speechwriters play in ideological construction of a state? What is the general character of executive politics in Africa? How is the notion of rhetoric of crisis linked to executive politics in Africa? Who are the model orators among African leaders and what can the concept of rhetorical leadership offer African States? How does rhetoric facilitate and enhance the relationship between African leaders and their Parliaments and publics? These and other pertinent questions crave answers.

Abstract: 250 words

Deadline: February 2010

Manuscript Length: maximum 6000 words

Deadline: August 2010

Editorial Policy

Articles sent to AJR: African Journal of Rhetoric are subject to a blind review process. Each article will be refereed by two members of the Editorial committee or our anonymous editorial consultants. The Journal has a high profile Editorial committee who will offer constructive suggestions about how to improve the quality of the submissions. Contributors will be notified in due time if their submissions are successful or not.

AJR is a publication of the African Association for Rhetoric.

Contact:

Editor

AJR: African Journal of Rhetoric

Emails: ajr@af rhet.org.za; aar2007@ukzn.ac.za

Phone: +27 (0) 72 461 7415

URL: www.af rhet.org.za